Great nose. Strawberry and raspberry, sweet red fruit. Rosehip, the typical paintbox-notes. The elegance is striking, very good. The temperature really makes a difference here, the warmer it gets the darker/heavier the notes. A lot of liquorice at room temperature.

The palate delivers a powerful attack and reveals the youth and vintage although the tannins ain't that dry anymore, silky but very present.

The aftertaste is long and beautiful, a great wine that speak of history and pride. Always a pleasure to drink the wines from Le Piane.

If a tender Burgundy, say from Chambolle, married a Barolo this would be their child. Delicious.

Beautiful, floral, almost pinot noir-like nose followed by a unique, tannic palate that is recognizable as nebbiolo but less chocolate-mint than it is Darjeeling tea. Absolutely loved it.

Recognizable as Nebbiolo and as quality. Nose particularly liked, as has been the case with these wines that I have tried. Approachable but will evolve over time.
